

Acid Flux is Dangerous

I was getting chest problems after using the usual active acid fluxes that modellers have used for decades.

I decided many years ago to switch to a much safer water-based flux which you can buy online and I have never had a problem since. The water-based flux appears to work very well on both brass and nickel silver. It does have to be washed off after a days work, as do any fluxes used.

I highly recommend this Water-based Safety flux available from 7mmlocomotives.co.uk

I do not have any connection with the supplier, but I'm a very satisfied user.

Water Based Safety Flux

Peter Storey